Greeting LoveTribe,

I was writing a note to a friend, Jennifer Berezan with our sponsorship $, for her fab event, Song of All Beings. Her company is Edge of Wonder which inspired me to write these words.

My bestie from NY, Joanne Black, a legend in the marketing world and now president of the, League of Lazy Ladies, whose motto is, "The easy way is hard enough", is visiting and will be Outback Fourth St. this Saturday afternoon with me.

Come visit!

Last week in a conversation, Joanne shifted gratefulness into a great fullness, which is where we are when we are truly feeling grateful.

Then on a walk with another bestie, Karen La Puma, around Phoenix Lake last night, we spoke of the subtleties that shift us into wonder fullness and into a great fullness.

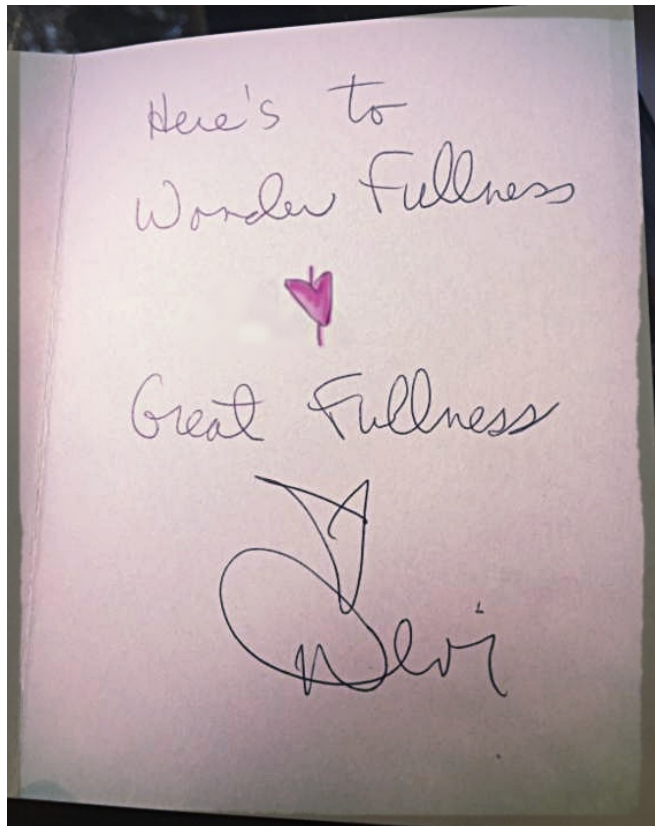

What interferes with our great fullness are our judgements around the situations that feel disruptive, as our mind scrambles for control, it brings us out of the "presence of mind" where we can respond, dance well with the situation. By being in wonder and trust in the "unfolding" allows the flow of life force from our desire that this appears to be blocking. Wonder dissolves resistance allowing presence, presence allows response ability .... response ability allows great fullness.

Dancing in this fullness, is the wonder FULLNESS of life, leading to the great FULLNESS of now.

My friend Bret Weinstein just wrote this fabulous story of his dance with his father, with his family, with his life. You can read that here

And if you want to come on a bit of the walk/talk around Phoenix Lake with us, here's a video we made and I poorly edited. BUT, as Eric Utne's grandmother always said, "If it's worth doing, it's worth doing poorly!"

Enjoy! xox Devi

OK I couldn't get the video done poorly ... but here's a great dance video and another example of dancing through resistance! Check it out!
