Hi from the Big Apple!

Last night at ABC Home in NY

My bestie Joanne (famous marketing "mad woman"), me and Don (founder of Alternet) at an event at our friend Paulette's beautiful Temple/Shop ABC Home. The event was a talk with Deepak Chopra and Marianne Williamson.

I sat next to Robert Thurman (famous Tibetan Scholar and father of Uma Thurman) who at the end of the talk, acknowledging his wife of 50 years, said the most important thing a man can do right now is to support a woman/women.

We heard the talk essentially saying, it's time to "up" our own individual game, whatever that is, in order to continue to survive and thrive as a species. Marianne was urging all to become more politically active.

Having just arrived in NY, Joanne and I stayed up (as usual), "solving the problems of the world". Designing a life of action even within inaction, that is "upping our game". And of becoming proficient and joyful, at cleaning house (loving from a distance people, places, things that no longer serve our path), while imagining and living into the imagination, of our talents to create a joyful world for all, for the I of us.

And honoring Memorial Day, Re-remembering, coming together to honor brave souls that stood up for their belief in a more just world ... Our evolution, now involution, into peace, respect, Love. Honoring our process while living the dream ... LOVE. Now it's our time to stand up ... to up our game ... in a good, loving, strong way.
