Aloha Lovetribe,

The sale will continue into the middle of the month with special events.

This weekend Robert and I will be Outback Sunday 2-6 (see below)

Last weekend we had our usual fun times dressing, treasure hunting, amazing deals and transformative conversations... here are a few examples of conversations from the couch Outback and of the current finds.

What do I want? Women often don't know.

Now as we move into a new era it's time to reignite our passions and maneuver past our beautiful (though often unconscious) modus operandi of looking at others needs before our own. Yes, men and other gender fluid people are moving into this new era, the conversations were with women.

We are getting a good look at what we don't want and if we can stay out of judgement and in curiosity, we can begin to see glimpses of the world we do want to live in and discover our new abilities create this. I have a strong muscle of manifestation developed and can attest to it's magic. I see us moving into an era where this skill will soon be an everyday occurrence for most. What do you have a taste for? This question has lead me down the path of discovering my passions. Try this "taste" journey for a day, a week, a lifetime and/or in a "taste" journal.

Then there were conversations about the end of the "shame" era. Women often have so much shame associated with their bodies and their desires. All people have shame as it is embedded in many of our religions and cultures. Shame is counter productive to accountability and to having a satisfying life (unless your a masochist). We spoke of the dangers of shaming others for poor choices, unconscious harmful actions and ways of thinking (instead of simply holding them accountable and bringing de-light into those dark spaces). Most of us have learned the difference between telling a child they are a bad person, versus that their action was hurtful. We spoke of new "mature" ways of being in and/or leaving relationships and partnerships with true love (one love).

This is just a taste of these conversations.

So many other great conversations have me re-energized to video blog them. I will be hosting a party this season to do this.

And now for the treasure hunting deals (with new pieces from cleaning out the warehouse) ... here's a peek!

Robert and I will be Outback in Berkeley Sunday 2-6

As many of you know Robert has been a host and guide to our oldest ancestor Spirulina. This unique blue green algae is the healthiest superfood with nutrient dense vitamins, minerals and the amazing blue color that helps eliminate heavy metals and radiation from our bodies.

Robert was a founder of the first spirulina farm in the US and the world's largest, but more recently has promoted microfarms to bring nourishment and healing to communities around the world.

this Sunday September 3 from 2-6 pm

Join Devi and Robert for tasty juice and coconut water drinks with fresh frozen spirulina from Robert's greenhouse microfarm in Half Moon Bay.
