I'll send out clarifications each week.

Many of you appreciate my musings. This week it's on loving kindness and respect for women.

Aretha Franklin, Her soul medicine has strengthened and fed our collective soul. Her music touched deep, awaking our humanity, our spirit. And she planted and watered the seeds of respect for and within women. Those sounds like the universal ommm will sing out through eternity.

Deep RESPECT to our Holy Queen.

And my musing on loving kindness through Nanette, Hannah Gadsby's "Comedy" Special at the end of this letter. Another woman's revolutionary act.

Please check out Nanette, Hannah Gadsby's Netflix Comedy Special. I'm not a big watcher of screens, but my daughter Diva told me to watch this, and I'm glad I watched until the end.

Hannah exposed her pain and shame in a way that evokes loving kindness.

We all live with hypocrisies and wounds in a culture that doesn't know how to deal with hypocrisies. Our culture has set up sides of rights and wrongs and defends them to the death ... or at least to shutting down, hiding our wounds, feeding and protecting them with righteousness, anger and hate.

What Hannah did was revolutionary. She exposed them, she exposed her anger, her grief, her shame and said she needed help to carry these wounds, she couldn't carry them alone anymore without putting out toxic anger into our collective humanity and perpetuating them for herself and everyone.

Hannah showed how loving kindness made it possible for us to share our gifts, with a story about Van Gogh and through the kindness of his brother he was able to bring his gifts to the world.

Whether we are sharing, gifting or expressing loving kindness to a person, community, or the world at large ... or to ourselves ... it is finding what it is that needs loving and loving that. It all goes into and comes from the same source. As my friend Ramm Dass says, I am loving kindness, I am loving kindness ...
