Aloha LoveTribe,

Some days I wake up in the morning and I hear a monster

A woman with long brown hair and a young child are sitting on a rocky shore, looking out at the San Francisco Bay Bridge. The woman is wearing a black top and a colorful patterned bracelet. The child is wearing a colorful patterned shirt and dark pants. The bridge is a large suspension bridge with a tall tower and many cables. The water is blue and calm. The sky is clear and blue. The text "Devi and Kobe discovering the construction site and Bay Area treasure" is overlaid on the bottom of the image.

Back to the pleasures of life, because our #1 job I believe in life, is to enjoy and spread joy.

Nature is my number one enjoyment, then being in communication with my other humans, and beauty in all its miraculous forms.

From last newsletter:

A couple of nights ago I learned just how powerful one of the delivery systems of beliefs and divisiveness was, watching the Netflix movie, The Social Dilemma. Here's a takeaway, although I recommend watching it.

Although Trump is a master of divisiveness in my opinion, the bigger threat is the algorithms on social media, whose only goal is to keep us coming back for more. By creating users (addicts) to social media it delivers more money to those corporations (Facebook, etc), because it generates sales. These algorithms are programmed to change the way we think, in order that we stay online. Feeding our fears and divisiveness keeps everyone engaged. They have not only led to a large group of people believing the world is flat, but many other more dangerous beliefs that are leading the world to civil unrest and war, according to the tech guys in the movie who created these algorithms. They are afraid of what they created.

Keep breathing, keep living in DeLight,
we are living in mythic times.

Be Fearless - Choose Love
