Mother's Day Blessings LoveTribe,

I once was given a book by a warlock (or so he said) I met in the park one night 49 years ago. The title of this little book was "God is a Mother". Unfortunately the book disappeared and in googling it, looks like it was off the radar. I don't remember the specifics but it was very to the point, deep and obvious, yet a new idea to me. Of course the creator and nurturer of this world is a mother!

So we are taking this opportunity to honor the mother within us all ... as the I of us (all our relatives ... and its all relatives). Honoring compassion.

And honoring our own mothers whether alive or not. Lets take a moment to appreciate her. And especially for those with more difficult relationships with their mothers. Appreciate her for taking on the challenges of motherhood and forgive her for her human unconscious/hurtful ways. And see how we have taken those unconscious ways on and forgive ourselves. Then see (or really dig for) the beautiful aspects of our mother (and ourselves) and LOVE!

And for the hallmark part of this day of honoring, all week through next Sunday, all jewelry 20 - 50% off, all shoes, socks, purses and scarves 20% off, plus one item of clothing 20% off. As usual mention LoveTribe for the clothing discount.

I'm off to LA shopping and I'm sure an amazing adventure will unfold. Hmmm ... I just remembered, when my daughter Shaye was 5, in her classroom they made plates with their picture holding a Happy Mothers Day sign and it had a sentence under the photo to be completed by each student.

"I love my mother because..." Shaye wrote, "She is so adventurous". At the time I felt guilty, like moms weren't supposed to be adventurous, they were supposed to be a solid rock which I confused with not adventurous. That freed me to be myself. And at another time when I was making a hard decision that impacted us all, my daughter Diva said, "Choose what makes you happy". Always great advice (and from a 10 year old!). They continue raising a great mom. Wow! What a lucky mom I am! Thanks Diva and Shaye!
Now off on my happy adventure!

xoxo Devi
