Hola LoveTribe,

We had a fun and fabulous Fashion show!

Here's a video from our portion of the show. If you want to skip the intro and go straight to the clothing, start at 54 seconds.

In these day wear and evening wear shows, you can see some of the new pieces now in for fall. Most of the models are wearing accessories and shoes from our new fall stock as well.

Dafina, olivia, Johnny Was, Citron, Rovers boots

We have an ABUNDANCE now in! We just received a large shipment of Biya coats (going fast!) and Johnny Was from my quick trip to LA last week. Plus Citron, Moonlight, Pile ou Face coats and many other lines of beautiful clothing, jewelry, scarves, shoes, socks, tights, leggings, men and womens' basics at great prices that have also recently arrived. Ready for a new season! You can see pictures taken of Heather in some of them below, as well as in the Fashion show video.

See our offer below to bring in a garment to donate to those in the fires that lost their clothing and you will receive 25% off of a new garment from our new fall or from our half off racks. We will also be collecting clothing (for men, women, teens and children) if you just want to donate. I am also considering in lieu of donating, opening a free shop for those affected by the fires in the North Bay if any of you know of someone with a space to donate temporarily, let us know.

Also 20% off 1 new fall item with the password: LoveTribe

Right now I'm in my home in San Miguel de Allende Mexico. So beautiful and blessed to have this clear air and peaceful vibe. Though quite connected to the fires and smoke most of you are in the midst of.

I went to the airport last windy Sunday night; it had that feeling in the air ...something big was up. My sister was in her home in Santa Rosa and as I was flying, the smoke was awakening her.

My sister Jennifer's home is so far ok, though she has friends who lost their homes and others who evacuated. I asked her why she and her husband don't get in their RV and go to an area with clearer air. She said because she wanted to stay and support her community. And that is what she has been doing. When I saw her on TV (on Facebook) she was interpreting for a policeman giving updates and directions.

Jennifer is a sign language interpreter; three of her friends that had lost their homes are deaf, she is putting her skills into action, into service. I'm sure she is much happier and more fulfilled, being of service, then she would have been by evacuating. And sometimes you just need to evacuate!

This is aligned with the theme of the week (& lifetime), which is the healing power of compassion. It started with a person I've known (though not well) over the last 40 years who is a Trump supporter saying last week in response to something I said, that "compassion comes with a price". Wow! That is someone who is blocking his compassion; otherwise he would know it is a gift.

I have been blessed by being born with a strong muscle of compassion. I say muscle because it can be developed and strengthened by use. Why is it a blessing?

It makes for a beautiful, healthy, love filled life!

I just read, "A Stanford university study along with other scientific evidence, revealed that a clear antidote for the epidemic of loneliness, depression, addiction and anxiety so prevalent in this country:Compassion."

I'm sure you've noticed, these tragedies grow compassion and community.

While I'm here in my home in San Miguel, my intention along with my other work is to write. Two of my Sheros (Ping Fu and Jeanne Houston) told me I must write my stories and they would help get them out! I've started and will share my stories for those that would enjoy reading them soon. For now, I've written more on this subject of healing disappointments, pains and sorrows through compassion and stoking and focusing desires as they are the juice to manifesting with story telling.

May you find the peace and healing in the love of community.

I have! Thank-you for being a LoveTribe lover of mine and ours!

xoxo Devi
