Celebrating with our Sisters this Sunday International Women's Day

I love that I have a diverse LoveTribe, and I support all personal choices on paths to love and beauty. My choice is Elizabeth Warren and I'm sad she dropped out. And I'm sad that many of my women friends for Bernie, instead of just speaking about his good traits said negative things about Elizabeth. I feel we as women are ready to stop undermining each other and start building each other up.

And especially when we have such a brilliant and courageous woman standing up and taking on the old boys club for us. I also see her as the most competent (she has a plan for that) and as many pundits said was her "weakest" trait, the most honest person running. We couldn't have asked for a better leader to make the shifts this country needs, to bring things into balance, into honesty and fairness, into love and connectedness. When asked why she thought she could win, as she must know a man is more likely to beat Trump, Elizabeth said, this is OUR time and spoke of women raising their voices, coming out to march in record numbers around the world, speaking out and standing for love over war, over greed, over fear. It doesn't look like we as women will be making herstory this year with a woman President. I guess our country isn't ready. I heard about a music festival in Dubai where many countries were represented by mostly beautiful symbols over their areas. The US was represented by a cowboy with his guns out and people had to walk through his legs to enter. OY! Pocahontas* and Trump would have made a great "reality show" which would have raised the consciousness of us all (besides being entertaining). And I have no doubt she would have won that one.

I really don't know how the opportunity this year for OUR time will play out, yet I'm excited to see what miracles will unfold in our lives ... personally. Every miracle sends waves of miracles out into the world, like a stone thrown into the water.

And you never know ... something can shift again and probably will.

Be Fearless- Choose Love-Allow Miracles

xoxo Devi

* Pocahontas is what Trump called Elizabeth Warren because she is (very small) part Native American. Wouldn't it be fabulous to have to have an actual self-identified First Nation woman for President? Let's envision that!
