As we continue our liquidation throughout the summer. We will still go week by week as we see if being open continues to liquidate merchandise, pay bills and be fun and safe for all.

The shipping hasn't been that smooth and there have been many delays, so boxes we sent from Berkeley didn't arrive until Friday and there are many more in the pipeline and arriving daily.

Besides liquidating merchandise, we are honoring orders we had placed from small vendors that were put on hold and now we are beginning to get those in. So new (great) things here & coming.

Just to add on to my last message about wearing masks, I think this article about their effectiveness is good. Here's the article, Masks

Justice - Resolute Together

I heard 2,000 came out in Ashland, in Solidarity, to shine their light on the injustice going on for way too long for our black brothers and sisters. Which I'm grateful to hear as Ashland is not a very diverse community. And though not in the physical "middle" of this struggle can still feel and act.

I've been listening to black voices, deep, raw, real ... many out there on social media. Some well known like Oprah, Van Jones, Trevor Noah, KPFA Cat Brooks all who have been working for justice for many years and shining the light on injustices. They and many other black voices are a resource for us all to heal our brokenness ... beautiful, real, raw heartbreaking communications.

This is our Berkeley Window before and after being boarded up. We didn't request to be boarded up as we use our windows to express in these times solidarity and resoluteness along with compassion and peace. But we did appreciate that the landlords did a great job to protect us, small women owned businesses, on the street, not just the large corporate shops on the street. I do believe however as Nicole Walters says, it's important to know that " an injustice is happening, she believes that looting is not ok, but she understands, she understands, and maybe if we saw that looting is grieving, we may see it differently". I recommend listening to her latest communication by clicking on her name. And of course as many of you know the looting is also being done by white supremists and anarchists. And most of the demonstrators are peaceful.

For our Berkeley window, we borrowed our Michelle Obama "Rosie the Riveter" poster from our Richmond (home of Rosie the Riveter) shop where she has "lived" for over a decade and going back today, now that our Berkeley Shop is boarded up. She's saying, Yes We Can, which includes, yes we can feel the deep grief and the rage that bubbles up when the grief is too much and the fear that it will never change also bubbles up. The rage is justified, and much of it will be channeled into the energy needed for change. For me, for now, that is listening to and supporting our black brothers and sisters in ways they request, add my strength to their voice and donate to Black Lives Matter. I'm sure other ways will arise and we all rise in solidarity.
